Refreshments provided – discussion to follow film

Set against the backdrop of violence in the Middle East, this documentary (2004, 115 minutes) follows a collaboration between young musicians from both sides of the divide: Israelis, Palestinians, Egyptians, Jordanians and Syrians.

Israeli conductor Daniel Barenboim & Palestinian writer Edward Said founded the controversial West-Eastern Divan Orchestra in 1999. Dedicated to fostering peaceful coexistence, the orchestra has been an overwhelming success, furthering hopes that music can promote understanding of different beliefs and cultures.

The orchestra is a metaphor for what could be achieved in the Middle East.

In the words of Barenboim:

"The impossible is much easier than the difficult..."
